News

New York was a “choppy luxury market” in 2022

New York City’s luxury market held fast in 2022, according to the year-in-review report from Olshan Realty. Some 1,304 contracts were signed at $4 million and above, totaling over $10.3 billion in sales. Much of that activity was in the first half of the year, with only 468 deals closed in the latter half of 2022. “We now find ourselves navigating a choppy luxury market—some stable weeks and some lousy ones,” wrote veteran realtor Donna Olshan, who prepares the report.

She advises against trying to compare this year to 2021, which saw 1,877 high-end sales, thanks to “a home-buying spree fueled by low interest rates and a bloated stock market.” But, Olshan added, 2022 falls “exactly in the middle of the pack” over the last decade. “[This year] did outperform each year from 2016 to 2020,” she wrote. “We’ll take it.”
